

Ariane Goerlich, med.vet., TA, DVM

Emergency and Critical Care Director; Vetcision

Dr. Ariane Goerlich joined Vetcision in February 2010 after working as an emergency and critical care veterinarian at Tufts V.E.T.S. 2001- 2009. Her professional interests include trauma, multi-modal analgesia and management of acute and chronic pain, physical therapy as well as emergency and critical care for dogs, cats, rabbits and small mammals, ophthalmologic and endocrine emergencies.

An attendant of an undergraduate school in Munich, Germany, Dr. Goerlich majored in French and Biology. After obtaining a Bachelor Degree in 1988, she went on to earn a Doctorate (TA, med.vet.) in Veterinary Medicine from the Veterinary Faculty of the Ludwig Maximilians University, Munich in 1993. Dr. Goerlich served amongst others a three month internship with general practitioner, Dr. Piorovic in Paris, France in addition to a month and a half long ophthalmology internship with Dr. Bachrach in Lincoln, Massachusetts in 1994. Upon graduation Dr. Goerlich dedicated the majority of her time to emergency medicine while also working in general practice.

A recipient of multiple MVMA's Continuing Education Awards, Dr. Goerlich is also a member of the Massachusetts Veterinary Medical Association (MVMA), the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA), the Veterinary Emergency and Critical Care Society (VECCS), the International Veterinary Academy of Pain Management (IVAPM) and of the Humane Society Veterinary Medical Association (HSVMA). She has taught Problem Based Learning classes at Tufts University School of Veterinary Medicine and continues to enjoy teaching. Dr. Goerlich holds Veterinary Licenses for Massachusetts and New Hampshire as well as Germany and EU Countries.

Dr. Goerlich's hobbies include gardening, hiking, running the community 5K, biking, horse back riding, reading and watching movies with her husband, Bill, and son, Benjamin. Their extended family includes Balou, a Border Collie/Dalmatian cross (and a hearing dog for her son) and Domestic Shorthair felines, Jeannie and Snowflake.